PREVENTING THE SUMMER SLIDE

Summer is here once again! One of our challenges in the summer is how to prevent summer learning loss and keep our children motivated in learning, not to forget previous knowledge and skills. Here are some things you can do to keep the Love of Learning alive in the summer:

- Utilize free available resources such as from your local library, parks and recs, local schools, Tutor.com, etc. During summer months, DOD MWR Libraries around the world hosts a range of activities and events. Register at www.beanstalk.com/dod and let the children enjoy participating in fun activities, while learning at the same time.
- Pick fun and interesting topics and allow your child to read and write in regular basis. Know your child's interests and things she/he enjoys doing and use those to incorporate learning concepts.
- Get your child involved in household activities such as gardening, cooking, taking care of pets, shopping, planning for travels, etc. Teach a learning concept while doing tasks together. If possible, introduce community volunteering.
- Explore outdoor places such as parks, rivers, gardens, etc. Visit your local parks and recs websites for special activities.
- Provide easy access to reading and listening materials during free time and while travelling.
- Create a consistent schedule to allow your child to read, write a story or listen to podcast.
- Allow time to socialize with friends. ENJOY THE SUMMER WITH FAMILY!

What is a Child & Youth Behavioral Military Family Life Counselor?

Military & Family Life Counselors (MFLC) funded by Office of Secretary of Defense (OSD) provides a non-medical counseling to military families. MFLC receives specific training to support service members, their families and survivors through the unique challenges of military life. Child & Youth behavioral MFLC is available at schools & at the youth centers to provide services to military children for a variety of issues, including low self-esteem, behavioral problems, social challenges and changes at home. The new MFLC contract will allow providing services to military families inside and outside of the base. Please contact your School Liaison for referral or info.
